

SOCIAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE (SRI)

About the Institute:

The Social Research Institute of NUM (National University of Mongolia) stands as a beacon of scholarly pursuit, established in 2014 with a profound commitment to unraveling the complexities of human society through rigorous academic inquiry. Rooted in a vision of fostering social progress and understanding, the institute has set forth an ambitious mission to conduct cutting-edge research, advance knowledge, and inform policies that address pressing social issues.

Mission and Goals:

At the heart of the Social Research Institute's mission is the advancement of academic freedom, social innovation, knowledge and social justice. Through interdisciplinary collaboration and engagement with stakeholders, the institute aims to:

1. Conduct high-quality research that illuminates the dynamics of social phenomena, from inequality, stratification and poverty to migration and cultural change.
2. Translate research findings into actionable insights, informing policymakers, practitioners, and the public to drive positive change.
3. Foster a vibrant scholarly community by nurturing emerging researchers, student assistanship, facilitating knowledge exchange, and promoting dialogue across diverse perspectives.
4. Enhance the capacity of individuals and institutions to address social challenges through education, training, and outreach initiatives.

Research Areas:

The institute's research agenda spans a wide spectrum of social issues, reflecting the complexity and diversity of contemporary society. Key research areas include:

1. Inequality and Social Stratification: Investigating the drivers and consequences of economic, educational, and health disparities within and across societies.
2. Social Policy and Governance: Analyzing the effectiveness and impact of policies aimed at enhancing social welfare, social work promoting inclusion, and addressing systemic injustices.
3. Migration and Diversity: Examining the social, economic, and cultural dimensions of migration, integration, urbanization and modern nomadism, with a focus on human rights and social cohesion.
4. Urbanization and Environment: Exploring the social dynamics of urbanization, environmental degradation, and sustainable development, with an emphasis on community resilience and environmental justice.
5. Technology and Society: Investigating the implications of technological advancements, such as AI, innovation, and digital platforms, for work, privacy, identity, and social relations.

Cooperation:

The institute boasts a diverse and dynamic team of researchers, comprising faculty members, postdoctoral fellows, graduate students, and research staff. Drawing upon expertise from disciplines such as sociology, anthropology, social work and political science, the institute fosters interdisciplinary collaboration to address multifaceted social challenges. Additionally, the institute cultivates partnerships with academic institutions, government agencies, NGOs, and community organizations, harnessing collective knowledge and resources to maximize the impact of its research endeavors.

Key Aspects of Cooperation:

1. Research Collaborations: The Social Research Institute of NUM actively seeks to establish partnerships and research collaborations with academic institutions, think tanks, and international organizations worldwide. Through joint research projects, academic exchanges, and collaborative publications, the institute aims to leverage diverse perspectives and expertise to deepen understanding of global social phenomena and inform evidence-based policy solutions.
2. Participation in International Conferences and Workshops: The institute actively participates in international conferences, workshops, and seminars related to social sciences, providing a platform for researchers to present their work, engage in scholarly dialogue, and network with peers from around the world. These international engagements not only enhance the visibility of the institute's research but also facilitate knowledge sharing and cross-cultural exchange.
3. Visiting researchers Exchange Programs: Recognizing the importance of nurturing international collaboration among researchers, the institute promotes exchange program in collaboration with partner universities.
4. International Outreach and Capacity Building: In addition to research and academic activities, the institute is actively involved in international outreach and capacity-building initiatives aimed at strengthening the research capacity of institutions in Mongolia and other developing countries. Through training workshops, technical assistance programs, and collaborative projects, the institute shares its expertise in social research methodologies, data analysis, and policy analysis to empower researchers and practitioners worldwide.
5. Policy Engagement and Advocacy: The institute engages in policy dialogue and advocacy efforts at the international level, leveraging its research findings and expertise to contribute to global policy debates and decision-making processes. By sharing insights on pressing social issues such as inequality, migration, and environmental sustainability, the institute seeks to influence international policy agendas and promote evidence-informed policies that address the needs of vulnerable populations and promote social justice.
